More U. S. Troops for India?

Certain senators, even including some of the President's supporters, are irked over curtailment of the Australian army, simultaneous with British requests that we send more U. S. troops to India.

The British request was made by Field Marshal Sir John Dill, former British Chief of Staff, now liaison officer in Washington. Sir John, personally one of the most charming and popular members of the British embassy, suggested to U. S. war chiefs that, in view of the Jap invasion of India, the United States might send more troops to that area.

The reply he got was: "What about the tremendous army you already have in India?"

Sir John had to admit that this huge British army is spread out through India largely for the purpose of preventing internal revolt.

Senators who have learned about this conversation are all set to do some blasting, should the White House send more U. S. troops to save the British Empire in India. However, they probably won't have to blast, because the President himself is understood to feel strongly on that subject.

KAISER'S NEW PLANE

Very little has been heard of the giant wooden transport plane which Henry Kaiser proposed building more than a year ago. However, the plane is nearing completion—though with no thanks to the navy.

Behind the scenes, the navy has done all it could to block the plane and at one time proposed cancelling the contract. Some insiders attribute this to pressure from the Martin bomber plant, which has already constructed a giant flying boat, Mars, for the navy.

However, the new Kaiser wooden transport plane will be so big that the Mars could almost be carried inside. Its fuselage alone will be big enough to hold a freight car. Its wing spread is 100 yards and it can carry a pay load of 60 tons, in addition to gasoline.

At one time, the navy got so insistent that the contract for the plane be cancelled that famous record-holder Howard Hughes, now a partner of Kaiser's, had to plead with the RFC to let him continue. The big flying boat is being financed by RFC funds, and Hughes actually promised to put up a $500,000 performance bond in case of non-fulfillment of contract, plus a guarantee to pay all costs personally beyond a certain date.

The big plane should be finished early in the summer.

Chalk up a score for Congressman Lyndon Johnson of Texas and Economic Czar Fred Vinson in helping the farmer on the price of eggs; also in cutting the profits of dried-egg manufacturers to the tune of several million dollars a week.

It happened through a queer quirk in price ceilings. The price on dried eggs had been fixed by the OPA at 25 cents a pound, but meanwhile the price at which farmers were selling their eggs to the dried-egg processors dropped from around 40 cents a dozen to 20 cents a dozen. Despite this drop in price, the dried-egg processors continued to get the benefit of the high ceiling price, while buying eggs from the farmers at one-half what they did before.

The spread between what the farmers got paid and what the egg processors sold for was so great that the processors were making money at the stupendous rate of $6,000,000 a week — until Texas' Lyndon Johnson stepped in with protests to Judge Vinson. The latter has now upped the price which the farmer gets for his eggs.

RUSSIAN WEARINESS

U. S. officials just back from Russia report a war weariness among the Russian people. This is not to be confused with military strength or weakness. Obviously, the military machine is operating with an efficiency such as never before.

For 25 years, Russia has been torn by war, revolution, or internal strain. Even during days of peace, the severe economic effort deprived the ordinary citizen of many elementary comforts of life.

But now, they see victory around the corner and want it to come quickly. Beyond that, they see security coming from cooperation with the other big powers of the world, giving them the time necessary to build up a state in which, according to the precepts of the Soviet philosophy, the dignity of the individual can be recognized and enjoyed.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Judge Sam Rosenman now occupies the suite of offices vacated by the late Marvin McIntyre, White House secretary. Rosenman formerly had only a tiny cubicle under the eaves . . . White House intimates suggest that the President probably doesn't intend to fill Mac's place. Instead of three secretaries (Steve Early, "Pa" Watson and McIntyre) he will have only two, plus Sam Rosenman as counsel . . . If FDR intended to run again, he might be more anxious to fill the vacant post.

Country Women Hold Interesting Meeting Monday

Campbell Country Woman's club met Monday afternoon, May 1, in Community hall, which was artistically decorated with flowers of the season, accented by the deep green of loquat leaves.

A brief business session, called to order by Mrs. W. H. Van Dyke, president, and opening with a patriotic demonstration, preceded the program which was under the direction of Mrs. Monica Parr, chairman of the day. Mrs. J. C. Agostinho introduced the music, the first numbers being vocal solos by Ruth Cousins, a Campbell girl who is receiving much acclaim because of her beautiful soprano voice, and saxophone solos by Leland Jones, accompanied by Marceline Benech. Miss Cousins was accompanied by Mrs. David Rutherford.

Mrs. Anthony Jurras introduced the speaker, Dr. Gertrude Witherspoon, armed with equipment from her laboratory, with which she made a working demonstration, told an enchanted audience secrets that surround the manufacture of modern cosmetics, explaining why they are a part of the field of chemistry. She also explained how the popular sun-tan lotion works, shutting out the rays of the spectrum, except for the ultraviolet, which is the one responsible for tan on the human skin.

The committee assisting Mrs. Parr were Mesdames Ira Grim, Raymond Bishop, Laura Keesling, Sue Boyce, and H. F. Cousins, in addition to Mrs. Agostinho and Mrs. Jurras.

New Pit River Hydro Plant Goes Into Operation

Redding—In the shadow of Mt. Shasta, on the banks of the Pit river 214,447 new horsepower went to work for the Pacific coast war effort April 29 when the new $25,000,000 Pit No. 5 hydroelectric plant of the Pacific Gas and Electric company was dedicated.

Power for war industries, power for farms, for business and for homes will be generated in this new plant, the largest hydroelectric powerhouse in California. Because of its importance to the war effort, officers representing the military and naval commands were present at the dedication.

R. E. Fisher, vice president in charge of public relations and sales, presided at the ceremonies, and the dedication was completed when a speech by Gov. Earl Warren of California, recorded earlier in Sacramento because he was unable to be present, was broadcast.

TB Association Annual Dinner Meet May 16th

The annual dinner meeting of the Santa Clara County Tuberculosis association will be held Tuesday night, May 16, 6:30, San Jose Country club. Meeting will be streamlined, with no outside speaker. The outgoing president, Dr. J. C. Cuneo will preside, and election of new officers and directors to serve during the current fiscal year will be held.

New budget will be presented to the board of directors for adoption and a final report of the 1943 Christmas Seal sale will be given by general chairman, John M. O'Keefe.

Any interested persons are invited to attend. Reservations may be made by calling the office of the association, columbia 650.

A new mobile chest x-ray unit of the association has just completed its assistance with the school and health department's tuberculosis control program; x-raying of students whose tuberculin tests showed positive reaction. In addition, adult family members of positive reactors were also x-rayed in order to find possible sources of infection, the unknown spreader and active case of tuberculosis. Campbell high PTA is sponsoring this adult project here.

The new x-ray unit, purchased with Christmas Seal sale funds, has been in operation since last August, greatly facilitating the association's x-raying program, by speeding it up and reducing the cost per x-ray.

Hold Vitamin C

If you must peel potatoes ahead of time and keep them soaking before cooking, put them in salt water rather than fresh water and save vitamin C, advise experiment specialists. Though potatoes lose some crispness in salt water, they hold more vitamin C and are excellent both in flavor and texture after cooking.

Orchard City Grange met in Odd Fellows hall Tuesday, April 25, the meeting honoring past masters and charter members. It was also the annual "jolly-up", and many visitors came to share the pleasure of the evening.

They sang comic and old-time songs, and past masters, charter members, and a group of members acted out the songs in costume.

During the evening special numbers by the quartet and solos by David Rutherford entertained.

Those dipicting the songs were Past Masters J. E. Wiesendanger, E. K. Clendenning, Harry Barnes, S. N. Hedegard, Stanley Smith, Lawrence Hendricks, Rob't Scholz, M. F. Hughes, Mrs. Jessie McChesney and present Master J. C. Gordon, charter members, Mrs. Jessie Campbell and Mrs. Charlotte Sutter. Others participating were Robert Lear, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Shadle, Martin Walsh, Joseph McKinnon, Russell Sargent, and B. Mathiesen.

S. M. Sanfilippo Is Candidate for State Assembly

S. M. Sanfilippo, candidate for assemblyman from the 29th Assembly district, was born in San Jose in 1907, attended school there and graduated from Santa Clara University; taught in high school, was deputy county auditor and has been in business as a general insurance broker since 1938. His family consists of his wife and three children.

Asked regarding the legislation in which he is most interested, he said:

"Primarily in legislation and administrative directives, both in the nation and in the state, calculated to secure the farmer in his cost of production and at all times keep him solvent through fair prices because, in this state and particularly in this county, the farmers' welfare is closely bound to the general welfare. That means that the present system of price control must be retained in the interest of the consumer, of labor and of the farmer.

Industry, agriculture, commerce and labor all have a stake in the general welfare and each is entitled to a proportionate amount of the national income which must be fair and just and without exploitation of either. I am therefore in favor of liberal and progressive legislation calculated to foster and encourage the social, economic and educational development of all the people in a bid for greater prosperity for all.

"I would support to the limit all rational postwar plans calculated to give full employment to all the returning soldiers able to work as well as all workers and prevent by all means a return to the days of bread lines, apple-selling and general unemployment."

Miss Marie Carman of Campbell, freshman student at San Jose State, where she is studying for an A.B. degree in Spanish, has been elected co-chairman of the San Jose USO Open House committee, which met Sunday. ILLEGAL LAWMAKING

Congress, during the past four years, has enacted only 1624 laws. But during the same four years, the President has issued 1097 "directives"—and the various administrative bureaus, commissions and departments in Washington have handed down the staggering total of 50,554 orders and regulations which are tantamount to laws.

That amazing analysis, recently made by Justus Craemer, Orange county publisher and candidate for U. S. Senator, goes a long way toward explaining the bedlam of laws and regulatory orders which have bewildered the American people.

Mr. Craemer is undoubtedly correct when he charges that Washington bureaus and departments "have illegally seized the law-making powers of the nation," and there can be no doubt about his further charge that we have been "regulated to the point of regimentation."

It is time that Congress took back the law-making powers which belong to it—and time that bureau heads were bluntly told that their job is to administer the laws, not make them.

COLLECTORS DE LUXE

Their sole duties will be—guess what? To collect from the employees of that department donations to various charities and to other funds..

Maybe this isn't important, but who is going to collect from the collectors?

VICTORY FOR RECLAMATION

California farmers and irrigationists won a signal victory in Washington last week when the House Appropriations Committee laid down the law to Secretary of Interior Ickes, and officials of the Bureau of Reclamation—telling them, in effect, that the major purpose of reclamation projects is and must continue to be reclamation, rather than experiments in the production of power-at-cost.

The House Committee, reprimanding reclamation officials for not having pushed construction of irrigation units of the Central Valley Water Project, called a halt to the proposal of Secretary Ickes to construct a power transmission line from Oroville to Antioch. It also severely criticized government officials for trying to sell Shasta Dam power "at cost," instead of at a profit which could be used to lower water costs to farmers.

Addressing his remarks to Ickes and officials of the Reclamation Bureau, Congressman Jensen of Iowa sharply outlined the committee's position in these words: "The intent of Congress was that the greatest possible revenue should be obtained from power to keep down the cost of water to the farmers. But now, as I understand it, you are offering power to towns along the Shasta transmission line at cost."

We are glad to observe that Congress hasn't forgotten the original purpose of Central Valley, and other western reclamation projects, and we hope that the committee's action will result in a speed-up of construction on long-delayed irrigation units which are desperately needed.

Keeps Air Safe

In America's war activity pyrethrum's chief role is to make sleeping and living quarters safe for soldiers. A newly compounded mixture of freon gas (used in mechanical refrigerators), an extract from pyrethrum powder, and a little oil is compressed into small steel cylinders fitted with valves. A turn of the valve allows a fine spray to escape. Within a few seconds the pyrethrum-laden mist will clear tents and other small spaces of lurking mosquitoes, probable carriers of malaria or yellow fever. One of the most important odd jobs of the spray is to cleanse transport planes of insects that might hitch-hike to new areas and continents to spread dangerous infections.

Dear Mr. Anderson:

You, as a member of the Subcommittee on Congested Areas, have done an outstanding job.

I enclose a copy of a letter which is self-explanatory.

With highest personal regards, I am

Yours very truly,

Carl Vinson is one of the administration's leaders in the House of Representatives. His letter to your congressman is indisputable evidence of the efficiency, co-operation and high type of representation which the Eighth Congressional District must maintain.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

FEB 16 1944

My dear Mr. Vinson:

Mr. Harold D. Smith, Chairman of the Committee for Congested Production Areas in my Executive Office, has called my attention to the excellent work done by your Subcommittee to investigate congested areas. The hearings and reports of this Subcommittee have done much to focus attention on the fact that in areas where recent large increases in population have occurred, one of the most important causes of high absenteeism and turnover in war plants and military installations has been the lack of adequate community facilities and services. You and the Chairman of the Subcommittee, Representative Ed. Izac, are to be congratulated on the effective way in which this work has been carried out.

Sincerely yours,

Jack Anderson wrote the report for the Sub-Committee on congested Areas which resulted in considerable increased housing for this area!

MRS. PALFREY HOWARD II reached for one of the new genealogy volumes, and drew it from the shelf. There were five more records of her family and Palfrey II; a surprise gift for her soldier sons when they should come home with their fighting achievements to be added to the family records.

It was a proud old room, the library. Palfrey II viewed it from celestial regions, if at all, and the boys—one in Australia, the other on Guadalcanal—had not seen it since their mother had assembled the ancient family furnishings and hung the ancestral portraits.

As she opened the book, the cupboard door of her memory unlatched and a familiar chuckle slipped out. "At it again, old girl?" The chuckle and question were as natural as when Palfrey II had been a rotund earth dweller.

"I know, Palfrey, that pride in our New England lineage always amused you," Mrs. Palfrey answered aloud. "But surely the boys will care after this war. It's the thing they are fighting for!"

"Did you speak, ma'am?" the voice of her maid asked from the doorway.

"No, Mollie. What is it? Oh, you have letters! I hope they are from the boys!" She rose eagerly. "They are, Mollie! That's Pal's writing. The other's from Win! I'd know his scrawl in Egypt. How wonderful to hear from them both at the same time!"

"It is indade, ma'am. I hope ye'll be findin' them both fine."

Mrs. Palfrey used a plebeian wire hairpin to slit the envelopes, ignoring the antique ivory cutter. Her lips moved as she read the first paragraph of each letter almost audibly. The maid lingered. "They are both safe, Mollie," Mrs. Palfrey announced soon, with happy tears in her eyes. She would read Pal's first—Palfrey Howard III, with the troops in Australia.

"Dear Mother:" (the letter ran)

"I'm O.K. Hope to come home on furlough, if our commander can arrange transportation. I've been in hospital. I'm all right now and I'm coming back to help finish this job as soon as I can carry a gun. Got a load in my shoulder, but it won't be long now.

"I have a surprise for you, Mother. I'm married to the sweetest Australian girl on the whole continent. Her name is Sidna. You'll love her, Mom. We might blow in any time. You'll be nice to Sidna, won't you? I'll have two weeks and then off to wherever Uncle Sam needs me most. We figured it this way, Sidna and I—we've both kept clean and straight, so we think we ought to raise some pretty fine kids to grow up in the new world, once we get it safe for them. Some fresh blood in the family, eh, Mom?

"Here's hoping we see you soon. I want you to know Sidna because we plan to settle in Australia when we've finished mopping up.

"Love,
"Pal."

The sheet dropped from Mrs. Palfrey's hand. Pal married! To an Australian girl! Planning to live in Australia! With trembling hands and half dazed, she drew out the second letter. Winthrop—her baby—bearing her father's name.

"Dear Mom:

"Pal got word through to me and we hope to come on the same transport. I'm slated for a furlough, too. I've been in hospital but the Japs didn't get this baby. I'm fine. Just wobbly, that's all.

"Say, Mom, do you mind if I bring a couple of my buddies home with me? They're getting out of hospital too. Swell guys—Abie Levine and Mike O'Hara. Abie's my bombardier, and Mike's my gunner. And boy, what a job we did on those little yellow bugs! They don't come any finer than Abie and Mike. We're brothers forever. I want to show them what a home and a swell mother are like. They don't remember either. We could all stand some of Mollie's cooking. See you soon we hope. Of course we can't be sure.

"Love,
"Win."

Abie Levine! Mike O'Hara! Mrs. Palfrey was stunned. "We're brothers forever." She gazed into the leaping flames. Palfrey Howard III, whose ancestors had founded this country, married to a girl of unknown parentage. It did not occur to her to concede pioneer stock to a girl of another country. And Winthrop—fraternizing with the sons of immigrants!

The fire burned low. At last Mrs. Palfrey's jeweled hands were clasped, and she prayed softly, "Oh, God, I thank Thee that my boys are safe. Nothing else matters. But, God, help me to be as big as my boys!" She rose resolutely and rang for the maid. "You know, Mollie," she said, "I'm not so sure the boys will like this room after all. I think we'll bring back that etching Win always liked, and the lake pictures."

"Thim's more warmin'," the girl answered simply.

A half-hour later two messages winged into space in the hope that in some way they would reach her boys. One read, "Can't wait to get my arms around you and Sidna." The other, "Certainly bring Abie and Mike." Both were signed "Mother."

THE BOOK MARK

by marty

"The Moon Was Red"
By Dana Sage

A few moons have passed since last your Book Mark gave a resume of new arrivals in the field of "Mystery." Now that "The Moon Was Red" has cast its reflection across my desk, it heads the list of recent "whodunits" from the point of interest as well as style and plot. It is in the South American country of Bolivia that the scene is laid for this story, and its leading character is a North American gentleman, aptly known to his Bolivian friends, as well as all other South Americans, as Don O'K. Donald O'Keefe Adams III, sole owner and director of Adams & Son, traders and shippers to South America for three generations, was used to solving problems. Upon boarding the lake steamer S. S. Illimani as it rode at anchor on the icy waters of Lake Titicaca, the welcome he received was unexpectedly warm—a razor-sharp machete that missed his neck by a miraculous inch. Here was a problem, the nature of which he had not met before. But Don O'K was equal to the situation, and the solution that he pulled out of his intelligent and perceptive brain relates a mystery superior to many.

Aboard the S. S. Illimani there was an oddly assorted group. Mrs. Symington Foster, the typical North American lady-with-a-briefcase, implacably determined to DO GOOD for the unfortunate Bolivians. Her handsome, arrogant husband, the archaeologist, accompanied her, apparently more than scientifically interested in the buried treasure of the Incas. Mrs. Foster's beautiful but discontented daughter was also a passenger as well as Kurt Eisner of Bolivia, who answered with military precision when he was addressed as Mein Herr. The attractive Marquesa Carlota de Montalvo floated around with frightened eyes and could not keep her attention away from Mrs. Symington Foster's briefcase. There was death hovering above the dark, fogshrouded deck — hovering and eventually striking.

This is more than a novel of mystery—it is also a novel of adventure. It is rich with the color of South America and its people.

Above all, it is a story about an extraordinary man, the kind of rugged individualist that only America produces — idealistic, shrewd, generous and subtle.

15 Years Experience on the Bench

Hedda Hopper: Looking at HOLLYWOOD

"IT TAKES an actor to direct an actor," says Irving Cummings. Well, he should know. Cummings spent years on the stage and screen before he directed such motion picture hits as "What a Woman!" and "My Gal Sal." He believes that a man who has worn grease paint himself understands a performer's problems better than one whose experience has been limited solely to wielding a megaphone, and how right he is!

Irving Cummings

"Actors require understanding by a director if they are to feel at ease and give the best that's in them," says Cummings.

On the set of "The Impatient Years" Cummings was directing Jean Arthur and Lee Bowman. The scene was a law court. Jean and Lee were asking for a divorce. Bowman is a returned soldier who arrived from overseas to discover that the marriage with Jean was perhaps hasty. Theirs is a whirlwind wedding after a four-day courtship, then the soldier goes abroad. When he returns the girl and boy are total strangers. It's a human situation — one that's happening all over the country.

Cummings talked the scene over in a calm way. When a bit of business didn't jell he showed the actors how he thought it should be done. Cummings acted it out for Jean and Bowman — did it darned well, too. That gave the actors added confidence.

Know the Ropes

While we were waiting for the lights to be adjusted for the next setup Cummings went on about the actors-directing theory.

"Take the first day of shooting. Actors get first-night stage fright just as they do in the theater. I understand it, having been through it for years. I do my best to mitigate the situation.

"Usually I try for a simple, casual scene for the first few shots. Nothing too emotional or demanding. This gives an actor a chance to ease into a characterization, get acquainted with his leading lady, and sense the pace and inflections of a particular role.

"Too, I try to shoot my films as close to the actual continuity of the story as possible. It's cheaper for a studio to have a film made without regard to continuity of scenes, because of stage space and actors' commitments, but I believe a better movie comes out if we all start from the beginning and work steadily toward its climax. That way, as on the stage, we get the feeling and tempo."

Irving Cummings should know about good pictures. He's been connected with them 35 years.

Eyes, Ears in Discord

The eyes and the ears do not work in unison, it is disclosed by experiments involving simultaneous visual and auditory signals, according to the Better Vision institute. In these tests the subjects were asked to observe accurately the position of a rapidly revolving hand on a dial at the instant a bell was struck. In relatively few cases did the subjects see and hear correctly the two signals. Most of the persons reported the position of the hand at an earlier or a later point than that at which the bell was rung.
